CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE 2013–14 REGULAR SESSION

SENATE DAILY JOURNAL

FIRST LEGISLATIVE DAY

IN SENATE

Senate Chamber, Sacramento Monday, December 3, 2012

MUSICAL PRELUDE

A musical prelude was performed by the Sacramento Children's Chorus, under the direction of Lynn Stevens. Accompanied by Helen Mendenhal.

The hour of 12 o'clock m., having arrived, Lieutenant Governor Gavin Newsom, President of the Senate, in accordance with Article IV Section 3(a), of the Constitution of the State of California, called the Senate to order and announced that the 2013–2014 Regular Session of the Legislature was about to convene, and informed the Senators that, pursuant to Section 9150 of the Government Code, Greg Schmidt, Secretary of the Senate; Paula K. Rossetto, Minute Clerk; and Tony Beard, Jr., Sergeant at Arms, were in their respective places. Assistant Secretary Zachary Twilla reading.

PRAYER

Prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Rabbi Mona Alfi:

We turn to our Creator on this day for guidance and for blessing. The people of the State of California have entrusted to these men and women a sacred task, to both represent and to lead us.

The people ask of their leaders to act with insight and compassion, and to serve with honor and fairness in both word and deed.

As this esteemed body begins its important work, we ask the Holy One, the Creator of us all, to guide you and to bless you with open hearts and open minds.

May you be strengthened by a sense of common purpose. May you find wisdom and inspiration in each others words. May you lead with the courage of your convictions and always serve with integrity. May you always find ways to work together and to overcome your differences so that we may create peace and prosperity, justice and opportunity for all who live in our State.

May this be God's will.—AMEN.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAG

Senator Wyland led the Senate in the pledge of allegiance to the Flag.

ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

Mr. Lieutenant Governor, thank you very much for presiding over today's event and for your excellent public service.

Mr. Secretary, Mr. Sergeant-at-Arms, congratulations to you.

To the former members, former President pro Tems, former members of both the Senate and the Assembly who I have seen here today, we welcome you.

We welcome all of the families and special guests. And of course we welcome and I thank my colleagues, the Senators of the State of California. I thank you for your service. I thank you for the confidence that you have shown in me, and especially to the newly-elected members, and the re-elected members, but especially to the newly-elected members—congratulations to you.

This is a great day of celebration and I hope you'll enjoy every minute of it.

To Senator Corbett and Senator De León, thank you for your kind words.

To Senator Huff, thank you for your kind words. (There's) a lot of talk today and every day about our supermajority and I want to use this occasion to reach out the hand of friendship to you and our Republican colleagues and make it clear to you that we hope you join us in governing this great state in a positive way.

And for those who got up and spoke on behalf of my nomination here today, we will endeavor to find you larger offices as soon as the session is over

This is a day of renewal and celebration. And to all the members, especially the new members, I hope that even on your most difficult and challenging day here in the Senate—and there will be some difficult and challenging days—that you remember today, that you remember the feeling of walking on this red carpet and the privilege that few of us have in life to be able to represent nearly a million people and to help better their lives. You've earned it, all of you, and I look forward to working with every one of you.

This is a time in California and in this country when many are remembering Abraham Lincoln—there's the great movie, there's the book—and there are so many words of Lincoln to choose from. And I was struck particularly by the statement that Lincoln made out of a team of rivals. In the 1858 famous debates between Lincoln and Douglas, when Lincoln attempted during the country's most difficult time in its history, he tried to define forward progress in a democracy where the separation of powers are designed specifically to make it easier to prevent something from being done than to actually allow positive things to be done.

Lincoln said in describing his view of progress that the founders meant to set-up a standard maxim for free society that should be familiar to all and revered by all, constantly looked to, constantly labored for, and even though not perfectly attained, constantly approximated and thereby constantly spreading and deepening its influence and augmenting the happiness and value of life to all people.

So I stand here today, December the Third, 2012, and I remember standing here four years ago to this very day. And certainly the words "progress" and "happiness" were not two words that most people used to describe the State of California in 2009.

Senator Corbett said it and we all remember it too well: a $42 billion deficit, a near economic collapse—a worldwide near-economic collapse—where California's own bond markets were on the verge of going away; a worldwide recession which, because of our size and because of our importance in the country and in the world, impacted California in greater ways than other states or even other countries.

And yet over the past four years, with two governors and the voters, our branch of government stepped up. Year after year, we made unimaginable cuts to public services that many of us ran for office in the first place to try to not only maintain but yes, in many ways, to try and grow.

I told the story to some of my colleagues and I repeat it here today; about my visit at the end of the last legislative session to Cal Expo in my district where the California Dental Association was having its annual volunteer dental fair on a Saturday morning. I thought I was going on the usual Saturday as we elected officials do, to have a cup of coffee and say thank you and visit some constituents. And what I saw I will never forget: endless lines of people, endless lines of Californians, working Californians many of them, who were not in line to get their teeth cleaned but instead were in line because they had gone years without any dental care, and needed surgery for dental abscesses, needed a root canal, people who had lost their teeth who wanted reconstructive surgeries so that they could go out and apply for a job with pride.

In 2009 we eliminated adult Denti-Cal as one example of the many cuts we had to make in this state to avoid a fiscal calamity. Now, none of it was easy and I don't take much pride in those cuts but as a result this deficit went from $42 billion, to $26 billion, to $19 billion to six billion dollars and now it is virtually zero. Even as we made awful cuts, we saved more than we lost when we consider that $42 billion was half of the state's general fund.

And in the midst of all of that, we passed historic water policy, we passed the nation's leading renewable portfolio standard, we reformed pensions, we fixed the workers' comp system, we fundamentally better aligned resources and responsibilities through realignment. We invested in infrastructure. We began to tackle the issue of regulatory reform. We accomplished foreclosure relief and much more. And now we are on the verge of a balanced budget. The voters passed Proposition 30. One era is ending in California and now a new and better era is beginning.

The Governor deserves enormous credit for the passage of Proposition 30. He led, he led smart, and he led well. And yet, I want to say on behalf of you, on behalf of our often-criticized and yes, imperfect branch of government, that November's election was also a validation that the Legislature faced incredible challenges with strength and with decisiveness, and we never flinched from the hardest of hard decisions.

We reflect on the past, and I do so today, only because it determines how we choose to decide to move forward.

Many pundits and many good people have said now with a balanced budget—a virtual balanced budget—and with the supermajorities there is a great risk of overreach. We hear that word a lot. And I want to stand here today and say, let's acknowledge the point. We know what people expect us to do. They want us to make government work better. They want us to eliminate unnecessary regulatory hurdles. They want us to invest taxpayer dollars in a way that focuses on outcomes—positive outcomes—and they want us to answer the most important question that a taxpayer has—"Am I getting value for the money that I pay to help run state government?"

We must answer that question and we must continue to answer that question when we spend money—that includes not only direct spending and direct public investment but tax expenditures as well. And I know this: having passed Proposition 30 the voters do not want us to burst out of the gate to raise more taxes. I'm OK with taxes as you probably know and certainly the voters were as well.

But the truth is that the only sustained way to grow a tax base in this state and in this country is to create more high-wage jobs. That we will endeavor to do.

So we get the warning. We get the overreach warning. We have heard it and we acknowledge it.

But frankly, I think you can focus too much on overreach because there is an equally compelling danger. It is the danger of being so cautious, so worried about creating controversy that we fail to take advantage of unprecedented opportunities. Power is by definition fleeting. Misuse it and you'll lose. Fail to use it and it withers away.

This is neither the time nor the place, given this day of celebration, for me to lay out a detailed policy agenda. And certainly, 40 members of this house as well as 80 members of the Assembly and the Governor will all be part of defining a policy agenda.

But suffice to say for today, that even if we were inclined to rest on the progress made so far, the needs of our state are far too great for us to even consider it. We have, by the newest Census Bureau measure, the highest poverty rate in the country. There are still too many people without work even though our employment rate has gone down. There is such a disparity rate within and among counties in California that in some counties the unemployment rate is nearly two-times the unemployment rate in other counties. That's not right.

Our high school graduation rate ranks in the bottom half of the country. Only 63 percent of African Americans are graduating from high school—70 percent of Latinos. That is unacceptable.

We have tremendous physical and human infrastructure backlogs including a yet-to-be-complete water bond. This rainy season, Senator Wolk reminded me that we have an urgent need to invest in our levies. And we have, not purposely, but as a result of these cuts, done real damage to education, to higher education, to public safety, to the courts and to help for the most needy.

Name an intelligent follower of recent California history who hasn't recommended that we take a serious look at changing our Constitution. And this is just a short list. Now everyone wants to know if we will seek to restore what has been lost. In other words, what are you going to do about spending? Well, the Legislative Analyst has projected a small deficit but then the Legislative Analyst projected some very significant surpluses going forward, up to billions of dollars of surplus by the year 2017.

And so even if we can't reinvest this year, we have to begin thinking about how we're going to approach the issue of public investment. And so I put out a thought for you today. What if we approach the question with the frame that is both logical and intelligent? As the economy grows and as the surpluses are realized, what if we agree that for approximately every dollar of surplus, we put one-third into a reserve or a rainy day fund, one-third toward reducing what Governor Brown has called the wall of debt, and you take one-third and—you bet—we restore some and hopefully much or all of what has been lost as a result of the cuts we've had to make over the last five years?

The answer to the question of "overreach or don't reach far enough" is actually pretty simple. The people want us to produce. In fancier words: get meaningful and real stuff done for the people. Solve big problems. Govern responsibly. Help people get back to meaningful work. Restore lost public investments as effectively and as reasonably as we can. Remove the word "dropout" from the English dictionary here in this state and in this country.

We can lay a foundation of tangible results, as we did last year and the year before, and if we do so we will then have a great opportunity to work with the Governor, to work with the Assembly and to work with the people to suggest even bigger changes.

I conclude with Lincoln. He also said during those famous debates, "With public sentiment, nothing can fail. Without it nothing can succeed." We all know who we work for and to whom we are accountable.

I'm not too worried about whether or not we can handle this success. We have come through the hardest of hard times with the people and have done it together over the last decade. If we work hard, we work together this session and we respect the people, we can't help but succeed.

Let's have a great 2013–2014 session. I thank you very, very much for your support.

ADDRESS BY MINORITY LEADER

Mr. President: It has been an honor to serve in this House for the past four years. It is my privilege to welcome the newest member of the Senate Republican Caucus, Senator Steve Knight. He will be a strong addition to our Caucus team. I would also like to welcome my new Democratic colleagues to the Senate.

Congratulations to the Pro Tem and the Democrat Caucus on the November election.

I strongly believe that each one of us, Republicans and Democrats, truly want what is best for California. We all want to see our people prosper, and we want to ensure that there are ample opportunities for people to get back to work.

Yet, all of us in the Senate, indeed, the State Capitol, face some very difficult challenges.

The voters have recognized this, and have entrusted the Legislature with $50 billion dollars over the next 7 years.

The Legislative Analyst's recent budget report highlights that even with these new revenues, unless we keep the state budget balanced we will be setting the stage for our own "fiscal cliff" in the near future. The message he presented was very clear: now is not the time to go on a spending spree.

Every child in California, including those in our rural and inner-city schools, deserves a world-class education. That simply isn't happening now

The challenges are many. In math, reading and science scores, California has ranked for years in the bottom ten compared to other states.

California, home of the Silicon Valley, ranks 47th compared to the rest of the nation in science.

Since 1990, education spending in California has consistently risen until recent years (adjusted for inflation)—by as much as 70%. Over that time, test scores have remained flat or in some cases gotten worse. Senate Republicans will focus on funding education, but work to reform it and empower parents to help achieve better results for our students. We must ensure a quality teacher in every classroom to bring test scores up and increase graduation rates for all students.

Republicans will work to ensure that the promise is kept to the students, education community and the voters of California, that all of the new tax money from Proposition 30 will be used to restore and increase K–14, UC and CSU funding. We trust you agree that our college students should not be seeing tuition and fee increases while these tax increases are in effect.

All of us in this room must work to put partisan politics aside and find ways to work together. Senate Republicans are ready to do our part.
