Under existing law, an employee or the Labor Commissioner may bring an action against an employer for nonpayment of wages and penalties. An employee who brings this action is entitled to recover costs and attorney's fees.

This bill would provide that if a judgment for unpaid wages or penalties remains unsatisfied for 6 months after the judgment becomes final, the amount of the judgment doubles, and then doubles again for each additional 6-month period the judgment remains unsatisfied, up to a maximum of 4 times. An employee or the Labor Commissioner may recover costs and attorney's fees for enforcing a judgment under this provision.
